TEXAS
DEMOGRAPHIC CENTER

@TexasDemography

Demographics.Texas.gov

- Here's a Song About Population
May 13, 2016
At its essence, measuring population is about counting births, deaths, and net migration. Mark Mather, associate vice president for U.S. Programs at PRB, explains population growth in this animated music video based on his original composition, "Break It Down (The Pop Song)." The tune also explores some of the nuances of other terms in the field of demography. The audience is middle-school students. [\[Read More\]](#)
- Introduction to Texas Domestic Migration
April 13, 2016
Texas has experienced unprecedented population growth in the early 21st century, adding more than six million residents since 2000. Domestic migration has been a key source of this growth. In recent years, Texas has become the number one destination for the nation's domestic migrants. [\[Read More\]](#)
